* Professors have the discretion to determine the number of hours allowed for their exams, and are not required to have those hours equal the number of credit hours awarded for the course.

Note: Law school policy gives a student the right to change an exam date if there is a scheduling conflict. Scheduling conflict means, either:

- a) Two exams scheduled on the same day, or
- b) At least one exam scheduled on four consecutive calendar days.

A student needing to change an exam date must see Dean Mandell.
